Internship Description

¿Hablas español? Are you looking for an internship where you can use your skills to create a positive impact?

The Centro de Justicia y Derechos Humanos de la Costa Atlántica de Nicaragua (CEJUDHCAN) in Puerto Cabezas is currently seeking an intern to help fulfill its mission of helping communities know and speak out for their rights. This internship will provide a unique educational and work experience that will allow interns to apply their academic interests to current global issues.

CEJUDHCAN works with seven indigenous territories that in total include more than 100 indigenous communities. These communities are currently facing pressures from forestry, mining, and oil concessions.

The intern would work directly with CEJUDHCAN staff to:
- Develop workshop materials, use social media and radio programming, and create informational brochures and manuals to raise awareness about the fundamental rights of indigenous communities, and in particular youth and women.
- Assist with community trainings for youth leaders
- Research the environmental and social impacts of resource extraction in indigenous communities

Preferred academic focus: Law, Journalism, Environmental Studies or Environmental Science, Family and Human Services, Women’s and Gender Studies, or Latin American Studies, though other majors are considered.

Qualifications:
- Knowledge of Spanish (fluency not required)
- Dedication to advancing human rights
- Committed worker who can adapt easily to a new living situation
- Must bring own laptop

Interns should commit to at least a 1-3 month long internship, though longer if possible.

Accommodations: Affordable, safe housing provided.

For more information, contact:
Lottie Cunningham Wren, Executive Director
Centro de Justicia y Derechos Humanos de la Costa Atlántica de Nicaragua (CEJUDHCAN) http://cejudhcan.wordpress.com/
Puerto Cabezas, RAAN, Nicaragua
Email: lottiecejudhcan@yahoo.com