

Food Studies

Winter 2014 • ENVS 298 • 4 credits

Instructor: Stephen Wooten

MW 2:00-3:20 pm

Food plays an integral role in our lives, socially, economically, physically and culturally. Academia has traditionally given food very little attention, but now is your chance. Learn about how individuals and communities choose and obtain food, where that food comes from, where it goes and how food systems around the world affect the environment.

- A new course being offered for the first time this winter term!
- The pre-requisite for the upcoming Food Studies undergraduate minor, set to launch in spring.
- Satisfies social science general education group requirement.

