New Course for Fall 2013

ENVS 607: Food Matters
Interdisciplinary Perspectives in Food Studies

Food is central to most aspects of human life. As academic interest in the realm of food studies has developed, it has become clear that there are key approaches and insights in disciplines across the social sciences, the humanities and the sciences. This course will introduce students to the wide ranging and inherently interdisciplinary “field” of food studies. Upon completion, students will have a working knowledge of and a foundational fluency with food studies scholarship \textit{writ large} and will be able to see how their own focus fits within the larger field. The course will follow a seminar format and will involve in-depth reading and discussion of literature from a wide variety of perspectives. This course is a foundational element of the new interdisciplinary Food Studies Graduate Specialization Program.

TUESDAYS & THURSDAYS, 10:00-11:20AM
Open to all graduate students in any discipline & no prerequisites required

Instructor: Stephen Wooten
(INTL / ANTH / ENVS)
swooten@uoregon.edu